THE HUMAN RIGHTS CREATIVES

The fifth webinar of this series focuses on the creatives among the graduates. There are those who may never step into the courtroom to defend human rights but are creating impact and lasting change through their artistic and cultural work. Meet the human rights creatives who are skillfully wielding the tools of literature, music, dance and film to advocate for human rights.

MODERATOR

Adebayo Okeowo is a human rights lawyer and the Africa Program Manager at WITNESS - an international human rights organization that leverages the power of video and technology in the defense of human rights. In the course of his career, Adebayo has used the medium of photography and film to address diverse human rights issues. He is the recipient of two human rights photography awards and has had his works exhibited in different countries.
