Community and Public Benefit covers impacts where the focus is on a particular area or local community, expanding outwards to embrace also regional, national or international communities. Therefore, impact investing involves larger banks and local banks, comparing sustainability focused banks (SFBs) and Global Systemically Important Financial Institutions (GSIFIs).

How can actually these banks be considered different?

Starting from GABV's annual survey on how ethical banks are supposed to be different from "traditional banks", let us go deeper into impact investing practices: insights on deposit and lending activities, financial products, and clients.
